Physics Majors Present at Rochester Symposium for Physics Students

On Saturday, April 1, senior Physics Majors Alex Sidou and Chris Wahl presented their senior research projects at the 36th annual Rochester Symposium for Physics Students (RSPS), which was hosted by the University of Rochester.

At RSPS, the students gave 15-minute talks to present results from their Physics Project Seminar research. The Physics Project Seminar is the capstone course in the Department of Physics. During their senior years, Alex studied growth of graphene on silicon carbide in Dr. Robinson's surface science group, while Chris searched for a standard candle effect in distant quasars under the guidance of Dr. Eric Monier.

School Deans Announced

With great excitement the Division of Academic Affairs announces the appointments, effective July 1, of Jose Maliekal and Thomas Hernandez as the Dean of Arts and Sciences and the Dean of Education, Health and Human Services, respectively.

Dr. Hernandez earned a BS in Psychology and Philosophy and a MS in Human Development, both at the University of Rochester. In 1996 he earned an EdD in Counseling and Human Development from the Warner Graduate School of Education and Human Development at the University of Rochester. He has held faculty positions at The College at Brockport since 1994 as an Adjunct Assistant Professor, Assistant Director then Director of Counseling, Assistant Professor, Associate Professor and Professor of Counselor Education. He has been Department Chair of Counselor Education and Interim Associate Dean in the School of Education & Human Services. Since summer 2015 and fall 2016, respectively, Dr. Hernandez has been Interim Dean in the School of Education and Human Services and Interim Dean of the Graduate School.

Dr. Maliekal earned a BS in Physics at the University of Calicut, a MS in Meteorology at the University of Cochin, and a MPhil in Environmental Science at the Jawaharlal Nehru University, all located in India. In 1989 he earned a PhD in Meteorology at the University of Hawaii. He has held faculty positions at The College at Brockport since 1990 as Visiting Assistant Professor, Assistant Professor, and Associate Professor in the Department of the Earth Sciences. He has served as Associate Dean, Interim Dean and Dean in the School of Science and Mathematics from 2003 to present.

20 Brockport students presented at the National Conference on Undergraduate Research at The University of Memphis, Tennessee, April 6-8.

NCUR 2017 Brockport group pictures
 Since 1993 The College at Brockport has had students present at the National Conference on Undergraduate Research (NCUR). This year, 20 students presented at the 2017 NCUR at The University of Memphis, Tennessee. The journey to Memphis by bus and flight took about ten hours each way and included early morning arrivals at 2 am as well as a very tight layover to catch a connecting flight. The student's dedication was rewarded with a great conference experience because NCUR is a unique national conference celebrating the research and creative work accomplishments of undergraduate students in just about every imaginable field over the course of three days. Three insightful and inspiring plenary presentations rounded up the conference experience. The individual students and their mentors are listed below. They were accompanied by Drs. Carly Reed and Markus Hoffmann, both from the Department of Chemistry and Biochemistry.

Biology: Clayton Brady (Adam Rich) and Evan Spencer (Michael Pelletier)

Business Administration: Kelley Valente (Jack Cook)

Chemistry & Biochemistry: Samantha Kietz (Carly Reed) and Autumn Smith (Brandy Sreenilayam)

Dance: Chloe London and Mia Martelli (both Tammy Carrasco)

Education and Human Development: Kelsey Rising (Christian Wilkens)

English: Samantha Swan, Ashley Farley (both Megan Norcia), and Rachel Campbell (Megan Osbourn)

Environmental Science and Biology: Holly Jackson (Katie Amatangelo) and Nicholas Farese (Jacques Rinchar)

History: Meredith Hutchings (Angela Thompsell)

Kinesiology, Sports Studies & P E: Randi Snopkowski (Brooke Starkoff and Elizabeth Lenz)

Mathematics: Christine Izyk (Gabriel Prajitura)

Modern Languages and Cultures: Rashana Lydner (Andrea Parada and Ewelina Barski-Moskal)

Nursing: Bridget Murphy (Elizabeth Heavey)

Rachel Campbell's travel was support by the McNair program.

Psychology: Jamie Tombari and Sarah Farnett (both Melissa Brown)

"Wonder of the World" Features Quirky Cast of Characters

Niagara Falls is a Woman's Target as She Leaves Her Marriage in Comedy Opening on April 21

Tricia Plinzke (l.) and Brigitte Meskell are featured in David Lindsay-Abaire's Wonder of the World, beginning performances at The College at Brockport on Friday, April 21, 2017, at 7:30 pm.

Most women whose marriages are failing face similar tropes as to the reasons: affairs, alcohol, work obligations, and the like. Cass, in David Lindsay-Abaire's wonderfully wacky comedy Wonder of the World, is different. She is faced with a husband who is enamored of the heads of Barbie® dolls, for all the wrong reasons. This "exceedingly whimsical" (The New York Times) production opens on Friday, April 21, 2017, at 7:30 pm in the Tower Fine Arts Center Mainstage Theatre. Tickets are $17/General, $12/Seniors, Alumni, Faculty and Staff, and $9/Students.

After discovering her husband's secret obsession, Cass realizes that she needs to get away to reconsider her marriage, and do some self-reflection. She sets her sights on Niagara Falls as a getaway, and in her travels she encounters an acerbic, suicidal, alcoholic traveling companion; an inept pair of private eyes; a lovelorn boat captain; and a clown of a therapist. Originally produced shortly after the events of 9/11, Lindsay-Abaire knew that the country needed to laugh again but, according to the playwright, he had a leading character who also needed a moment to "search for the meaning of her life, like many of us. People need signs to give them guidance, something to believe in. And that's hard to find."

Wonder of the World was another in a series of comedies featuring women for Lindsay-Abaire. He did not need to look past his childhood to learn the effects that women had on him. The dramatist freely admits "that my mother is a really funny, very outspoken, bigger-than-life woman. And she's an amazing storyteller. So it's no surprise she's influenced my work."

Ruth Childs, director of the production and an associate professor in the Department of Theatre and Music Studies, enjoys when social commentary can be addressed with a sense of humor.

"There's a therapist in the play who—for a perfectly legitimate reason—is dressed like a clown. Now, if that isn't some sort of critique of the entire field of psychotherapy, I am not sure what is. But through that group therapy session, you see how all the characters need a good look in the mirror to realize that they are fallible. That they are imperfect just like us. That we all have bucket lists of things we want to do, but life gets in the way. It's not just them; it's everyone. We are all in the same place."

Triumph #3

A mechanical gem of the 19th century.

On April 18, at 7pm Charlie Cowling will be giving a talk at the Morgan Manning House on Main Street about the agricultural manufacturing concern of Seymour and Morgan. Both men were fascinating individuals, and their company was a cutting edge outfit both in mechanical and organizational innovation. Shown here is a salesman's model of the Triumph Reaper #3 from the 1880s. This model is a gem of 19th century work, and was used by one of their salesmen to demonstrate how it worked. (The village museum even has an actual Triumph reaper on the top floor!)

Friday April 21st "Service and a Slice" at 3:30pm in Benedict-Dobson Lounge where representatives from Americorps and Peace Corps will discuss volunteering opportunities. In addition Nikole Van Wie and two current undergraduate students will also discuss their involvement with community service opportunities.

New life for a student paper

Digital Commons and a 1962 student paper.

Back in 1962 Eleanor Coselman, Class of 1948, was taking a grad class here, on the Folklore of the Empire State. Her paper was entitled "Reminiscing in Royalton," and was about the history and folklore of that community in Niagara County. A well written paper, but once the class was done and she had shared a copy with the library where it was placed in our local history collection it was little used for many years.

In recent years however it was scanned, and added in digital form to our Digital Commons, where it has been downloaded over 800 times! This is a great illustration of the promise of free and open access platforms like the Digital Commons, that documents and other materials that once were limited in access and use suddenly gain an entirely new life. Kim Myers of the library has done sterling work in guiding this platform to where it is today!

Senate debate!

Fascinating discovery of early debate about the senate's role etc.

Adam Finkelstein '17 is one of six students doing 3 credit internships in the Rose Archives this spring. His research has been on the former "Student Faculty Association," which ran from the late 1940s to the mid '60s. In 1965, as the college was expanding ever more, including going from being a Teachers college to a comprehensive liberal arts college, some major governance changes were made.

In brief what was done was to end the Student Faculty Association, replacing it with two separate bodies: the College Senate for the faculty & staff, and Brockport Student Government for the students. In the course of these changes there was a lot of debate about governance, how best to achieve it, what form it should take and so forth. What Adam ran across was a record of the debate, in a publication of the time called the Faculty Forum. A copy of the relevant issues from the Spring of 1965 are attached. The debate is between two senior faculty figures of that time, Howard Kiefer, Philosophy, and Ambrose Corcoran, Art.
